PREFACE.

As Chairman of the Public Libraries Committee when the printing of this catalogue was begun, my colleagues have honoured me by asking me to write a preface on its completion. Present circumstances make it impossible for me to write more than a brief note, but this is unimportant in view of the excellent historical introduction by my friend and colleague, Mr. Howard S. Pearson, which follows.

It is obvious that in every district there is produced a certain amount of literature which will pass out of existence entirely if not preserved in a well-organized public library. Much of it is of purely local interest, but it is nevertheless invaluable to the historian of the future.

There is no reason to doubt that the Public Libraries now recognise their obligations in this direction, and that in the most important districts, the public have access to the principal local material.

In the formation of such collections, many debatable points must arise. How far, for instance, is it wise to select or discriminate, as opposed to the policy of collecting all local literature? What are the boundary limits to prevent adjoining districts from overlapping, and what are the best methods of classifying, cataloguing and preserving the material collected?

A general settlement of these and many other points should lead to even better results than the present, and if provision were made for local collections for all districts, the net result would be, in effect, the establishment of a huge national local collection, located in different parts of the country. The catalogues of such collections, produced on a uniform plan, would constitute an invaluable record of local material.

Of our own collection the Committee are, I think, legitimately proud. There are still gaps to be filled, as is inevitable in a collection of such recent growth, but they are neither serious nor numerous. That the collection contains so much that is rare and valuable, is largely owing to the genius of the late Mr. Sam Timmins, whose invaluable collections were acquired for the library in its early days.

The catalogue now issued cannot claim to be a Bibliography of Birmingham, but it is the nearest approach to such a work that has ever been issued, and I am sure the Committee will not rest satisfied until future supplements make it possible to claim the work as a Bibliography of Birmingham literature.

E. MARSTON RUDLAND,

Chairman of the Public Libraries Committee, 1913-15.

INTRODUCTION

By HOWARD S. PEARSON

(Chairman of the Reference Library Book Sub-Committee).

The Public Reference Library of the City of Birmingham will soon contain 300,000 separate items. A complete printed catalogue of a library so extensive as this might be too large to be manageable or practically useful: and separate catalogues of some of the more important divisions may, perhaps, be all that can be profitably undertaken. Of these the Birmingham Collection, while far from being in any sense the most really valuable, is certainly the one which most pressingly calls for a catalogue. It is the one department in which a modern and provincial library may, and must, be expected to be supreme. In many directions completeness may be beyond its means or out of its power; but as regards the life and history of its district it is reasonably expected to be the final authority. The very bulk of the present volume will bear witness that, from the beginning, this duty must in Birmingham have been recognised and faithfully performed.

The greatness and commercial importance of Birmingham are of modern growth, but the town itself is an ancient one. It is at least a thousand, and probably twelve hundred years old; and, as in all such cases, the earliest records are mainly documentary and legal, each separate item being unique and correspondingly difficult to obtain. Here it is that the effects of the lamentable fire of 1879 were most fatal. The printed books that were lost have long since been replaced, but the manuscripts in the Staunton the Hamper and the Archer collections have left gaps which can never be filled.

Every effort, however, has been made to form a fresh collection, and nearly a thousand deeds ranging from the years 963 to 1800 are in the library. Some few of these are careful transcripts, but the great majority are original documents. These deeds, very briefly described, occupy some forty pages of the catalogue, and it is interesting to find the names of some of our old streets—High Street with its many aliases, Dale End, Bull Street, Moor Street, New Street—in ink which has been dry for five hundred years. Though scarcely literary, those legal documents are often inspiring. The thirteenth century must have been one of remarkable energy and enterprise in Birmingham. Within a hundred years nearly coincident with this century, a handsome parish church was built, the ecclesiastical rights over that portion of the parish of Aston which adjoins Birmingham were purchased, and the church of St. John, Deritend, was erected as the actual property of the people concerned. Gilds were founded both in Deritend and in Birmingham, the latter of which still survives in the Grammar School of King Edward, a well-endowed Priory was established, and a charter was obtained for a four-days Fair. These were no mean achievements in a single century for a mere market town.

Many deeds referring to the history of these establishments are in the Library, and chief among them the two deeds relating to the foundation of St. John's Church, documents of almost unique interest, having few parallels in the ecclesiastical history of our country.

The invention of printing in the middle of the fifteenth century is a landmark of vital significance in the history of human life, and though it preceded the foundation of the Birmingham Public Library by four hundred years, the two events stand in the relation of cause and effect. In its earlier advances our city had no share. Birmingham with all its energies was a quiet and secluded place. It stood upon one only highroad, and that not an important one. It had no great house, no ecclesiastical foundation of any magnitude, no school of note, and was of no account as a military position. It was probably centuries after the invention of printing before it possessed a single printing press, yet it is intimately connected with one of the most important books ever issued from the press. John Rogers, a Deritend man, who presumably worshipped at St. John's and was educated at the school of the Deritend Gild, became the coadjutor of Tyndale in his translation of the Bible into English. After the treacherous arrest and execution of Tyndale, Rogers completed the preparation of the book, bore its cost, and under the assumed name of Matthew, published it at Antwerp in 1537. For a short time, this was the first really complete English Bible authorised by Government, and when the troublous days of Mary came, Rogers became the first martyr to fall by her persecutions. A fine copy of this notable book is among our treasures.

The first book known to have been printed with special reference to Birmingham is Nye's Almanack for 1642.

"Calculated exactly for the faire and populous Towne of Birmicham in Warwickshire, where the Pole is elevated above the Horizon 52 degrees, and 38 minutes," and Nye himself was in all probability a Birmingham man. In that year the Civil War broke out, and three separate tracts were published describing the assault on Birmingham by Prince Rupert and the partial destruction of the town.

Thomas Hall must also be mentioned as a man who wrote books in Birmingham but had them printed elsewhere. He was a militant puritan, well known in his day and somewhat of an extreme partisan, but a lover of learning. At one time he was lecturer at St. Martin's, and then Perpetual Curate of King's Norton, and in both places he diligently fostered the formation of public libraries. That which belonged to Kings Norton is now carefully preserved on the shelves of our library.

The date at which the art of printing actually began to be practised in our town cannot be definitely stated, but it was probably long before any book was produced here. In his Life of Johnson, Boswell remarks that "Warren was the first established bookseller in Birmingham," and adds that "there was [before his time] not even one in Birmingham, in which old Mr. Johnson used to open a shop every market day," to which Macaulay gratuitously adds that not a Bible or an almanack could be purchased in 1685, yet as already stated an almanack had been specially compiled for Birmingham nearly half a century before. From whom Boswell acquired his information it is impossible to say, but certainly it was not from Johnson, whose own uncle was a bookseller here for thirty years. These statements were not only false, but even absurd. The names of no less than seven booksellers in Birmingham before 1717 have been recorded in Mr. Joseph Hill's admirable work, The Book Makers of Old Birmingham. Thomas Hall's well known book The Font guarded with XX Arguments was printed in London for a Birmingham bookseller in 1652. Three of these booksellers appear in the old Church Books of the district as having provided Prayer Books, Psalm Books and Bibles. An excellent engraving of a Newcomen Engine is in the Boulton and Watt Collection in the Reference Library. This, from a copy in the Salt Library, Stafford, appears to have been printed and engraved by Henry Butler in New Street, 1719. One does not so much blame Boswell for his item of loose gossip ; but it seems strange that Macaulay, a man of encyclopædic knowledge, should have forgotten that the opening of shops or stalls for the sale of books at fairs or on market days was a custom as old as the invention of printing, and universal in all civilised countries. William Hutton followed that very plan much later in the eighteenth century.

The first two books known to have been actually printed in Birmingham are A Sermon on the Martyrdom of King Charles the First, printed and sold by Matthew Unwin, 1717, and A Loyal Oration composed by James Parkinson, Chief Master of the Free School of Birmingham, with the same date. The only question which arises is whether Birmingham was before or behind the times in this matter, and that is answered by a passage in the autobiography of Thomas Gent, a noted bookseller of York. Speaking of the year 1714, he says "there were few printers in England, except in London, at that time—None then, I am sure at Chester, Liverpool, Whitehaven, Preston, Manchester, Kendal, and Leeds." It has also been conclusively proved that Johnson's first work, a translation of The Voyage of Father Lobo to Abyssinia, a book of considerable size, was printed here by Warren in 1735, although with the imprint of London publishers.

It is impossible here to do more than mention the memorable work of Baskerville, which lasted from 1750 to 1775. By this work, the more remarkable because Baskerville started with absolutely no knowledge of printing, Birmingham became world-famous as the metropolis of the art, and a place of pilgrimage to all who cared for the making of the book in its perfection. The subject occupies five pages in this catalogue.

Here we may briefly chronicle the beginnings of the newspaper press in Birmingham. The Birmingham Journal was first published by Warren on November 14th, 1732. A single copy of a single number, that for May 21st, 1733, is all that is known to survive. It is in the possession of the Proprietors of the Daily Post, who have presented a photographic facsimile to the Reference Library. With Aris's Birmingham Gazette, which began on November 16th, 1741, the case is very different. It exists even to the present day, and, owing chiefly to the kindness of the present proprietors, a nearly complete set in 222 volumes has been placed in the library, an altogether invaluable storehouse of the detailed history of our town.

It would be obviously impossible to attempt here any description, or even analysis, of the actual literature properly so called, vast in volume and often excellent in quality, which has been produced in Birmingham. It must suffice to say that practically the whole of it is upon our shelves. All local books are added to the library as a matter of course, and those which are lacking are only so because they are for some reason unobtainable. Much more to the purpose is it to give some idea of the enormous store of what may be called the historical records of the life of our city. In some respects, these are analogous to the manuscripts and deeds which are our only guide to the remote past, although the majority are now in printed form.

The government and management of a vast city such as ours accumulates these records in ever increasing numbers. They are seldom read, but they must always be in place for reference. A few examples will show their nature. There are 323 local Acts of Parliament relating to transit by road, canal, or rail, alone. Miscellaneous Acts fill fifteen pages of the catalogue, which, we may say, averages about thirty entries to the page. Of volumes relating to the Poor Rate, we have no less than 830, placed in the Library for public reference, and these are sometimes invaluable, as necessarily containing references to every individual house.

The educational work of the city in the direction of art alone fills 12 pages ; Libraries and the Midland Institute each occupy 12 pages, and King Edward's School 6 pages, and Education generally 7 pages. Fourteen pages are required to chronicle the stormy episodes of Priestley and the Riots ; there are thirty-four novels based on Birmingham life, and three pages are required for the titles of the poems it has inspired. The extraordinary number of 20 pages are occupied solely by items commencing with the word "Saint" and really chronicling the multifarious work of our churches.

Then there are other records not official in origin, but in their way equally valuable. Directories begin in 1770 and fill 8 pages. Guides require half the space. Maps fill no less than 14 pages. Information which might in many cases be sought elsewhere in vain, is contained in local and amateur magazines. In these, Birmingham has always been rich, and the air seems to suit them for they live long. To give a few instances, the Central Literary Magazine has been published for forty-five years; the Institute Magazine for thirty-five years; Edgbastonia for thirty-seven; and the 42nd volume of the Transactions of the Birmingham Archaeological Society has been published. The Town Crier ceased to exist in 1903 in its 42nd year. The others are still living and vigorous.

Happily our city has long been notable for the industry and care with which local enthusiasts have collected every scrap which they could find, whether in word or picture, relating to its history and life. Among these, the names of Hutton, Hamper, Clarke, Timmins, Joseph Hill, Osborne, Rabone, Malins, Bickley and Wright Wilson deserve special mention. That which was destroyed in the great fire excepted, almost the whole of their collections are in the library. The local newspapers have also for long periods published weekly articles dealing with the same subject, and often illustrated. These are continued even among all the difficulties of the present time, and are valuable as preserving innumerable personal recollections which are full of interest and which could only by this aid have been placed on permanent record. Among these collections may be mentioned thirteen folio and nine quarto volumes of cuttings from local newspapers, chiefly due to the care of Mr. Sam Timmins; nearly fifty volumes of various sizes dealing mainly with the history of Handsworth and the district, collected by Mr. G. H. Osborne; twenty-one volumes of manuscript and other records collected by Dr. Wright Wilson for his "Life of George Dawson," and presented by him; and very numerous collections of views, portraits and maps, many of which are rare or unique. No fewer than ninety-six separate subjects are referred to in the Catalogue as being illustrated by collections of cuttings, gathered together by the care of some one interested therein.

Even so brief a sketch as this must be, of the local treasures of the Reference Library, would be very incomplete without some grateful recognition of the private enthusiasm to which its wealth in local records and reminiscences is so largely due. In many cases the collections accumulated with so much care have been as generously presented to the city as they were laboriously gathered in its interest. No public expenditure and no public exertion could have obtained what has here been garnered in illustration of the annals of our great city; and no public gratitude can exceed the value of the service. It is true that many of the details are mere trifles, but they are trifles which refer to our own work, our own history, and our own familiar streets, and to us, few if any of them can be quite uninteresting. Indeed it is hard to say what fact can be regarded as trifling, when our Chief Librarian has only recently been summoned to produce in a Court of Law a mere play-bill, on the evidence of which a sum of thousands of pounds might have depended.

Many of our literary and other societies have presented their Minute Books and other archives. Among these are the Central Literary Association, the Midland Arts Club, the Clarendon Art Fellowship, and the Dramatic and Literary Club, and it is hoped that other societies will follow their example, and place in safe keeping records of so much interest and value to coming generations.

Some of the absolutely unique possessions of the Reference Library have been incidentally mentioned. To these may be added the following:—Autograph letters of Dr. Johnson and of the Withering family; the famous letter of Baskerville to Horace Walpole; manuscript collections of Mr. W. C. Aitken, of Mr. R. J. W. Davison of Moseley, of Mr. Andrew Deakin, and of William Creighton, an employé of Boulton & Watt ; original drawings and sketches by J. Vincent Barber, Samuel Lines, Warren Blackham, W. Tarlington, and others ; also the only known perfect copy of Bradford's great view of Birmingham, which would seem for some reason never to have been published. Pre-eminent among all the gifts to the Library is that of the vast Boulton and Watt Collection, presented by the munificence of Mr. George Tangye, J.P., together with a generous contribution to the cost of installing it in a special room. This priceless collection is of world wide interest, and is in itself sufficient to make our Reference Library famous.

We conclude with an earnest appeal to those who are the depositants of ancient deeds and documents referring to local history or of local interest to follow the example of so many liberal donors and present them to the Public Reference Library. It would be an act which would enrich our stores, and yet in no way impoverish the donors. When in our possession, such documents are carefully read, docketed and catalogued, and are kept in a fire-proof room where they are, humanly speaking, exempt from all fear of fire or loss. They can be consulted at any hour when the library is open, without delay or difficulty, and if needed for legal purpose at any time, are at once available, since the Library is bound to produce them to any Court when required for evidence. Our Reference Library is a monument of public generosity as well as of public spirit—a surprisingly large proportion of its treasures is of the nature of a private gift for public purposes, and the more we give to it, the more interest we shall feel in our institution, which stands high among the legitimate sources of our civic pride.

HOWARD S. PEARSON.

A NOTE ON THE CATALOGUE.

Reference to page 558 of this work will show that this is the fourth catalogue of the Birmingham Collection that has been issued since the opening of the Reference Library in 1866, or the third since the great fire of 1879, in which the original collection was almost entirely destroyed. The first catalogue of the present collection was a temporary list (40 pages) issued during the busy period of the reconstruction of the Library, and this was superseded in 1885 by a volume of 94 pages which formed part of the complete Catalogue of the Reference Library, but was also issued as a separate publication. In the interval between 1885 and 1918, the Collection has naturally grown to a very considerable extent, though perhaps not quite so much as the difference in the size of the past and present Catalogues would imply.

In the former editions the Collection was roughly classified under such headings as

Acts of Parliament.
Corporation and other Official Documents.
Directories.
History, Topography, Guides, etc.
Institutions and Associations.
Maps, Views, etc.
Pamphlets.

As very few books were entered in more than one section, many important subjects were divided. The Society of Arts, for instance, appeared in "Exhibitions" and "Institutions"; Wallis on the Art Manufactures of Birmingham, appeared in "History"; while many pamphlets on Birmingham Art were practically lost in the huge collection of pamphlets, where they appeared only under their authors' names. It is difficult to understand why "Pamphlets" was introduced at all as a section in a classified catalogue, seeing that the size or form of a work has nothing to do with classification.

Apart from these matters, however, the cataloguing had passed through so many hands in the long interval, that when it was decided to issue a new edition it was found desirable to re-catalogue the whole collection. After careful consideration, the Dictionary form of catalogue was adopted. In the present catalogue, therefore, all books are entered under the names of the authors, and also under the subjects if of local interest. Anonymous works are entered under the first words of the titles.

It should be observed, however, that subject headings are only admitted so far as they are of local interest. Thus:—

Salt (T. P.) Phrenology: a paper read for discussion to the members of the Birmingham and Midland Institute will be found at "Salt" and at "Midland Institute," but not at "Phrenology," which heading would appear only in the complete Catalogue of the Reference Library. From this it follows that analytical entries (which are introduced for the first time) are made only for articles of local interest. Thus, the articles in such local periodicals as the Central Literary Magazine, The Warwickshire Antiquarian Magazine, and many others, are not catalogued separately, unless they relate to the city itself.

The best features of the former catalogues are preserved under such headings as Directories, Exhibitions, Guides, History, Newspapers, etc., with the added advantage that the whole resources of the collection on any one subject are entered at that subject. Abbreviations have been introduced, but not to any great extent, and those used are so obvious that it does not seem necessary to give any list. The place of publication is also given when it is other than London or Birmingham, and the number of pages when it is less than 100.

Different types have been used as follows :—

AUTHOR HEADINGS.

Subject headings.

Title entries.

In a catalogue of local literature, full bibliographical entries would make the volume inordinately long and unnecessarily expensive. Nevertheless, much of this kind of literature requires comparatively long entries, or the items catalogued (many of which do not appear in any other catalogues or bibliographies) are hardly identifiable. In the former editions, practically all entries were confined to one line, but, in the present case, no such artificial restriction has been adopted, and comparatively full titles have been given.

With all these explanations, however, the chief reason for the enormous growth of the catalogue is the growth of the collection itself. In 1885 there were less than 80,000 volumes in the Reference Library. Now there are nearly 275,000, and the large number of entries with numbers over 200,000 shows how rapidly the collection is still growing.

The catalogue has been prepared under great difficulties. The re-cataloguing of so large a collection occupied many months and was not finished when the war broke out. As the slips for books on the same subjects were often made at long intervals, it was intended to subject them to considerable editorial revision before sending them to the printer, but, with a sadly depleted staff, this could not be done to the extent that had been hoped. Consequently, inconsistencies will be found, though none, it is hoped, of a very serious nature. The progress of the catalogue through the press has also been slow, owing to shortage of staff both at the library and at the printers. This will explain the inclusion of certain books in the latter part of the volume under one entry only, the other entries remaining in manuscript.

It is a pleasure to express hearty and cordial thanks to those who have helped in the work.

Mr. Councillor E. Marston Rudland proposed the printing of the catalogue during his Chairmanship of the Committee, and, notwithstanding long absences from Birmingham on war work during the last two years, has followed the work with the greatest possible interest.

Mr. Howard S. Pearson has been a generous donor to the Birmingham Collection for many years, and his great knowledge of Birmingham literature gives special value to his introduction to this Catalogue. He has also read the whole of the proofs, and it is difficult to express the thanks that are his due.

Mr. R. K. Dent, historian of Birmingham and Librarian of Aston Manor Public Library from its opening in 1878 till its inclusion in the city in 1911, has not only read all the proofs, but has supplied most of the historical notes to be found in the catalogue. His wide knowledge, great enthusiasm, and kindly help, ungrudgingly given, have been of the greatest possible assistance.

Of the services of Mr. Herbert M. Cashmore, Deputy Chief Librarian, it is impossible to speak too highly. So far as the preparation of the "slips" was concerned, Mr. Cashmore simply carried out official duties, though I suspect that much of the work was done in his own time. But shortly after the printing was begun, Mr. Cashmore joined the Army, and has since had an exceptionally busy time. Notwithstanding this, he has read through the whole of the proofs, both in galley and pages, in his 'spare' time. His corrections and suggestions made, not in the Library with the material at hand, but from a military camp, have been a wonderful tribute to his knowledge and enthusiasm, as well as his recollection of the details of much of the obscure literature which passed through his hands.

Thanks are also due to Mr. E. J. Packer (Chief Assistant), Messrs. F. J. Patrick, J. F. C. Watson, G. L. Burton, and Miss A. D. MacKintosh, members of the staff, for work on the catalogue at different stages of its progress.

MATTHEW BOULTON.

Boulton and Watt Collection.

In addition to the works relating to Matthew Boulton catalogued above, the Library possesses the valuable collection of relics of Boulton and Watt presented to the City by George Tangye, Esq., J.P., in 1911, and moved in October, 1915, to the Central Libraries where it is stored and exhibited in the two rooms formerly used for the Patent Library. The collection, of which it is hoped to issue a separate catalogue, includes the original working drawings (about 36,000) of the firm of Boulton and Watt, their correspondence and business books (including the very interesting letter books) accumulated since the beginning of the Soho factory in 1762. The autograph letters of many great engineers and other notable men are of special importance.

The collection also includes a large number of documents relating to William Murdock (the inventor of gas lighting and the maker of the first locomotive engine), original working models of engines and other mechanical objects (Watt and Murdock's rotary engines, Watt's steam indicator, etc.), portraits, medals, coins and tokens minted by the firm, books, pamphlets, magazine articles, newspaper cuttings, etc.

NOTE.—A Musical Festival was held on behalf of the General Hospital in 1768 (for programme see Bunce (J. T.): The Birmingham General Hospital and the Triennial Musical Festival). A second festival was held in 1778 on behalf of the General Hospital and St. Paul's Church building fund. Strictly speaking the Triennial Festival as a permanent institution was not established until 1784, but the two earlier festivals belong by right of parentage to the series which followed. There was no festival in 1793, partly owing to the destruction by fire of the Theatre Royal (where the evening concerts were held). The festival due to be held in 1833 was postponed to 1834 for the completion of the Town Hall.

Where the collection of programmes for the year is not complete the titles of such programmes as are in the Library are given.

1778. Judas Maccabæus.

1780. Grand miscellaneous concert.

NOTE.—This is not strictly one of the Festival performances but was given on behalf of the General Hospital.

1784. Sacred concert. Goliath. Miscellaneous concert.

1787. Grand miscellaneous concert. Israel in Egypt. Second miscellaneous concert. The Messiah.

1790. The Messiah. Acis and Galatea. Sacred concert, (selections from Handel).

1796. L'Allegro ed Il Penseroso. Grand miscellaneous concert.

1799, 1802, 1805. Wanting.

1808. Grand miscellaneous concert.

1811. Choral service, St. Philip's. Grand miscellaneous concert.

1814. Choral service, St. Philip's. Grand miscellaneous concert. [Second] grand miscellaneous concert. Grand selection of sacred music. [Third] grand miscellaneous concert.

1817-1843. Complete.

1846. Elijah. (First performance). Grand miscellaneous concert.

1849-1879. Complete.

1882. [First] grand miscellaneous concert, including Graziella. The Redemption. (First performance). [Second] grand miscellaneous concert, including The Holy City. Psyche, and miscellaneous selection. Mozart's Symphony in G Minor. Brahms' Triumphlied, etc.

- Nott Pamphlets :—
NOTE.—The undermentioned pamphlets by various writers originated in a series of tracts mainly directed against the Jacobin party, believed to have been written by Theodore Price, of Harborne, who carried on the business of a nail merchant in Birmingham as late as 1830, and wrote under the pseudonym, "Job Nott, the Buckle Maker." The authors of other tracts who adopted the names of other members of the pseudo "Nott" family are unknown, but it is believed that John Morfitt wrote the "John Nott" tracts. The most complete series of these tracts was contained in the Staunton collection and perished in the fire at the Reference Library, Jan., 1879.

Reform Movement, 1817-1832:—

NOTE.—The Reform movement, for the enfranchisement of large towns (of which Birmingham was one) which had no parliamentary representation, and for the extension of the franchise, began in Birmingham in 1817, with the establishment of the Hampden Club, and the first great demonstration was held on Newhall Hill, January 22, 1817. The imprisonment of the Birmingham Reformers in 1821 brought the movement to a standstill, but it was revived in 1828, and the Birmingham Political Union was established in December, 1829. The agitation was carried on by this organisation until the passing of the Reform Act in 1832. For other work of the Political Union see under Political Union.

 Sawyer's (Mrs.) Room, Old Square :—
 NOTE.—Mrs. Sawyer's Room in the Square was the principal assembly room in the town prior to the building of the Royal Hotel. In October, 1765, H.R.H. the Duke of York, during a visit to Birmingham, was present at a ball given in his honour in this room. According to Hutton the Duke remarked "that a town of such magnitude as Birmingham, and adorned with so much beauty, deserved a superior accommodation, that the room itself was mean, but the entrance meaner." At the first musical Festival, in 1768, the ball, which became a feature of the earlier festivals, was held in Mrs. Sawyer's Room, and it was announced that "the streets will be lighted from the Playhouse to the Ball Room."

Theatres:—

Theatres in General:—

NOTE.—The first theatre known to have existed in Birmingham was in New Street, as early as 1743. There was no connection between this building (which was only in existence for a short period) and the later New Street theatre, now the Theatre Royal. A theatre was opened in Moor Street some time before 1747. This building was the "cast-off theatre" referred to by Hutton as having been procured by the Methodists in 1764, and used by them until 1782. The New Street Theatre, now known as the Theatre Royal, was built in 1774, and rebuilt in 1792, 1820 and 1902-4.

Theatre Royal :—

NOTE.—The Theatre Royal was built in 1774, and was twice destroyed by fire and rebuilt, in 1792 and 1820. It became a 'patent' theatre by Act of Parliament in 1807. Prior to 1834 the evening concerts in connection with the Triennial Musical Festivals were given in the Theatre Royal. The theatre was again entirely rebuilt in 1902-4, the building now (1918) in use being the fourth on the same site.
